Great Days in Harlem

A neighborhood renaissance is in full swing above Manhattan's Central Park. What are you waiting for?

One Saturday morning, we stopped for a breakfast of prosciutto panini at Settepani, a cafe and bakery on the corner of Malcolm X and 120th Street. Settepani has a clean design, terra-cotta-colored chairs, marble-topped tables, and a banquette along one wall. We scored the last available table - between a family of Spanish tourists eating napoleons and a neighborhood couple wearing coats over their pajamas and slippers, lingering over coffee, scones, and the Times.

Settepani

Leah Abraham's smart looking Italian bakery serves scones and cappuccinos to tourists and locals alike.
